I. INTRODUCTION

Retailing is evolving into a global, high-tech business. Wal-Mart is now the world’s largest corporation and has become the largest food retailer in the United States. French based Carrefour is the world’s second largest retailer. Retailing in developed countries is big business and better organized. But the retail scenario in India is different much of it is in unorganized sector. There are more than 12 million retail outlets of various sizes and formats. And almost 90% of them are less than 500sq.ft.in size and the per capita retail space is only 2sq.ft. While US has 16 sq. ft.

India has the largest number of outlet in world i.e 9 outlets for 1000 people. Most of them are independent and contribute to the retail sales. Because of increasing number of nuclear families, working women, greater work pressure and greater commuting time, convenience has become a priority for Indian customers. They ever want things under one roof for easy access and multiplicity of choice. The growth and development of organized retailing is driven by two main factors- prices and benefits the customer can’t resist. Retailing in India is gradually inching its way toward becoming the next boom industry. The whole concept of shopping has altered in terms of format and consumer buying behavior, modern retail has entered India as seen in sprawling shopping centers, malty-storied malls and huge complexes offer shopping, entertainment and food all under one roof. The Indian retailing sector is at an inflexion point where the growth of organized retailing and growth in the consumption by the Indian population is witnessing a significant change in its demographics. Retail and real estate are the two booming sectors of India in the present times. And if industry experts are to be believed, the prospects of both the sector are mutually dependent on each other. Retail, one of India largest industries, has presently emerged as one of the most dynamic and fast paced industries of our times with several players entering the market. Accounting for over 10 per cent of the country GDP and around eight per cent of the employment retailing in India is gradually inching its way toward becoming the next boom industry. As the contemporary retail sector in India is reflected in sprawling shopping centres, multiplex- malls and huge complexes offer shopping, entertainment and food all under one roof, the concept of shopping has altered in terms of format and consumer buying behaviour, ushering in a revolution in shopping in India.

II. LITERATURE REVIEW

Unplanned purchase, according to (Bhakat & Muruganatham, 2013), is when a person feels a strong and overpowering want to buy a product without having developed a pre-shopping purpose before entering the store. Unplanned purchase is defined as something that is not planned, a location where buying decisions are driven by a stimulus (Beatty & Ferrell, 1998); (George, B. P., Yaoyuneyong, 2010); (Banerjee, S. and Saha, 2012). The stimulation is provided through sensory marketing or product touch, and is based on clear and visible information regarding special offers. This will assist customers in remembering what they require. Because the purchasing decision is made in a short period of time, impulsive purchases are common. Because purchasing decisions are rarely balanced with considerations, facts, and alternative option, impulsive purchases frequently occur in a short period of time (Tendai, Mariri dan Crispen, 2009). Unplanned purchases, according to (Mowen & Minor, 2010), are purchases made without any prior thought or purpose of making a purchasing decision before entering the store.

Unplanned purchases are influenced by a number of circumstances. Sales promotion is one of the reasons promoting unplanned purchases, according to (Keller Kotler, 2009). According to (Fakthul & Surhayon, 2016), there are five reasons that contribute to unplanned purchases. Store atmosphere, shopping lifestyle, reference group, brand trust, and incentive shopping hedonist are some of the factors to consider. Among the various elements that influence unexpected purchases, this study focuses on four major factors: sales promotion, lifestyle shopping, store atmosphere, and hedonic buying motivation. Sales promotion is the first factor that influences unplanned purchases. The major ingredient of a marketing campaign is sales promotion, which consists of a variety of incentive tools, most of which are short-term and meant to encourage larger and faster purchases rather than a specific product or service. VI. CONCLUSION

The study has helped in understanding the brands of Big Bazaar and customer's awareness about Private Brands of Big Bazaar. When the customer's think of big bazaar the only thing comes to their mind is promotional offers, customers are shopping at Big Bazaar only for the sake of offers and ambience. Hence Big Bazaar has to introduce various kinds of offers to gain more customers. The company has to concentrate on redesigning and restating different media campaigns and the communication media that can be use would be Television for reach to masses while Radio and Internet can be used to reach specific target groups. Product range and product depth is good so store has to maintain this and still try to improve it Big Bazaar has the potential to make customers happy and retain them. And it has its brand name in the market but has to concentrate on rural masses to increase its reach, footfalls at the stores and market share. The company can also concentrate on E-commerce based mode to collect orders and deliver it physically through their stores.
