Abstract: This project explore the realization of process improvement the recruitment and selection in the organization. Recruitment is the process of searching for prospective employees and stimulating them to apply for jobs in the organization. Selection may be defined as the process by which the organization chooses from among the applicants, those people whom they feel would best meet the job requirement, considering current environmental condition. In today's rapidly changing business environment, organizations have to respond quickly to requirements for people. The research hypothesis of the study were tested using spss tool like correlation, one way anova, chi square test. Finally with all the findings out of the percentage analysis it was concluded that the perspective of the employees towards their organization with regards to recruitment and selection are in confirmatory terms which shows the positive aspect of the organization and its relationship with its employees. The nominal Factors like age, educational qualification, experience, of the employees are found to be related with their few perspectives in a progressive way which talks about the optimistic thought about the organization, namely their individual activeness at workplace to perform betterment, receiving appreciation from supervisor s, the inspiration of quality and the development opportunities they receive. Selecting the wrong candidate or rejecting the right candidate could turn out to be costly mistakes for the organization.

I. INTRODUCTION

Before going into the discussion on recruitment and selection process, it would be adapt to understand the word “recruitment and selection process”. Recruitment is the process concerned with identification of sources from where the personal can be employed motivating them to offer themselves or employment. Recruitment is the process of finding and attracting capable applicant for employment. The process begins when new recruits are sought and ends when their applications are submitted. The result is a proof of applicant from which new employees are selected. Recruitment is a competition dust as corporation compete to develop, manufacture and market the best product service, so that they also compete to identify, attract and hire the most qualified people. Recruitment is a business and it is a big business. Recruitment is one of the major functions of HRM. It helps the manager to attract and select best candidates for the organization.

A. Definition Recruitment

Parry & Wilson (2009) stated that “recruitment includes those practices and activities carried out by the organization with the primary purpose of identifying and attracting potential employees”. As success of service sector as in case of civil aviation industry depends upon the human capital, recruitment & selection of the right people into the service business is crucial to achieve organizational success (Zheng, 2009). According to Edwin B. Flippo, “Recruitment is the process of searching the candidates for employment and stimulating them to apply for jobs in the organization”. (1979) A major internal factor that can determine the success of the recruiting program is whether or not the company engages in Human Resource Planning. In most cases, a company cannot attract prospective employees in sufficient numbers and with required skills overnight. It takes time to examine the alternatives regarding the appropriate sources of recruits and the most productive methods for obtaining them. Once the best alternatives have been identified, recruiting plans may be made. (Mandy, 1981) Effective HRP greatly facilitates the recruiting efforts. Recruitment is a process of finding and attracting the potential resources for filling up the vacant positions in an organization. It sources the candidates with the abilities and attitude, which are required for achieving the objectives of an organization. Recruitment process is a process of identifying the jobs vacancy, analyzing the job requirements, reviewing applications, screening, shortlisting and selecting the right candidate. Recruitment planning is the first step of the recruitment process, where the vacant positions are analyzed and described. It includes job specifications and its nature, experience, qualifications and skills required for the job, etc. A structured recruitment plan is mandatory to attract potential candidates from a pool of candidates. The potential candidates should be qualified, experienced with a capability to take the responsibilities required to achieve the objectives of the organization.

II. REVIEW OF LITERATURE

A. Work by Alan Price (2007)

In his work Human Resource Management in a Business Context, formally defines recruitment and selection as the process of retrieving and attracting able applications for the purpose of employment. He states that the process of recruitment is not a simple selection process, while it needs management decision making and broad planning in order to appoint the most appropriate manpower. There existing competition among business enterprises for recruiting the most potential workers in on the pathway towards creating innovations, with management decision making and employers attempting to hire only the best applicants who would be the best fit for the corporate culture and ethics specific to the company (Price 2007). This would reflect the fact that the management would particularly shortlist able candidates who are well equipped with the requirements of the position they are applying for, including team work.

B. Work by Silzer et al (2010)

The process of recruitment does not cease with application of candidature and selection of the appropriate candidates, but involves sustaining and retaining the employees that are selected, as stated by Silzer et al.

C. Work of Silzer et al. (2010)

It was largely concerned with Talent management, and through their work they were successful in resolving issues like whether or not talent is something one can be born with or is it something that can be acquired through development.

D. Silzer et al (2010)

That was a core challenge in designing talent systems, facing the organization and among the senior management. The only solution to resolve the concern of attaining efficient talent management was by adopting fully-executable recruitment techniques. Regardless of a well-drawn practical plan on recruitment and selection as well as involvement of highly qualified management team, companies following recruitment processes may face significant obstacles in implementation. As such, theories of HRM can give insights in the most effective approaches to recruitment even though companies will have to employ their in house management skills for applying generic theories across particular organizational contexts.

E. Word conducted by Silzer et al (2010)

Silzer described that the primary objective of successful talent strategies is to create both a case as well as a blueprint for developing the talent strategies within a dynamic and highly intensive economy wherein acquisition, deployment and preservation of human capital-talent that matter,, shapes the competitive advantages and success of many companies.

F. A.M. Gurav and Pralhad Krishna Mudalkar(2011)

III. OBJECTIVES OF THE STUDY

- A. To observe the procedure to select the candidates from interval as well as from external sources in the industries.
- B. To study the stages of selection procedure in the industries.
- C. To design and approve the interview process for various post to be filled up.
- D. To design profiling system and assessment of the received application.

IV. RESEARCH METHODOLOGY

The researcher chooses descriptive research design method in the study. In this research, non-probability sampling was adopted, under that convenient sampling method was used. Sample size 130 .The research collect data from two sources primary data and secondary data. Tool are used for data collection is Questionnaire.

Primary data was collected using structured questionnaire distributed to the 130 respondents. Secondary data were collected from journal and online articles tools used for data analysis were chi-square, correlation and ANOVA test were applied in this study to reveal relationships among variables from the data.

- A. Career growth and development policies skill can be improved.
- B. They should also follow new selection techniques and methods for better recruitment.
- C. The member of the selection committee should be well qualified and experienced people. So that the selection of the employee will be more effective.
- D. For filling up vacancies recruitment process can be adopted more in the concerned.
- E. It suggested that the Hr department should involve various departmental heads while recruiting an individual, because the departmental heads can analyze the technical knowledge relating to the job to the particular department.

IX. CONCLUSION

The recruitment and selection process of an employee is recognized by the organization. They encourage the employees to develop their recruit. The management knows the essentials of employee talent. They utilize the skills and knowledge of an employee. The organization is maintaining healthy relationship between the employee and management. And they encourage team spirit to work co-coordinately. They provide more freedom to do the work effectively. They improve the communication level among the employees. The employees would be satisfied if their talent is recognized and improved. Though the concept of recruitment and selection originated few decades back but even at present it is not implemented in every industry. But the work done shows until and unless organizations don't focus on basic principles given by concept of recruitment and selection like involvement of top level management, proper training and empowering of employees etc no new concept/techniques can do wonders for quality improvement. Further from this survey I hope the organization will be benefited and with the help of the suggestions given the organization can improve its functioning and the overall Recruitment and Selection Process in the organization and its performance will increase.
