I. INTRODUCTION

The Co-operative Credit Movement in the world started in Germany. In tolerable adverse conditions for the poor in Germany led to the Growth of a new economic organization known as the co-operative credit society in this country was the result of an enormous amount of work done by two men- Raiffeisen and Schulze. Origins of the co-operative movement in India can be traced back to the co-operative credit societies act, 1904. This act provides establishment of credit societies both in rural and urban areas for providing credit facilities of unfortunate ordinary man. Urban co-operative banks ranked a very significant position in the Indian banking system. The urban and semi urban areas are served by urban co-operative banks (UCBs).

The first urban co-operative society was established in India, which is known as "Annyona Sahakari Mandali Co-operative Bank", under the guidance of Vithal Laxman also known as Bhausahab Kavthekar located in Baroda on February 1889. Middle class Marathi people established this society. The Urban Co-operative Banks (UCBs) credit movement in India started with principal object of catering to the banking and need for credit requirements of the urban and semi – urban middle classes. Examples are small traders, businessmen, artisans, salaried people, and factory workers with limited income. The people found out of the modest means to get away from the control of the moneylenders.

The Co-operative Credit Societies Act, 1904 was passed on 25th March 1904. The first co-operative society formed in Gadag District of Karnataka under First Co-operative law of India. This was launched on 8th July 1905 by the villagers of Kanaginahalli under the leadership of Shri Siddanagowda Sanna Ramanagowda Patil with the initial share capital of Rupees two thousand. But this had very limited scope covering just the credit co-operative Societies. Later in 1912, The British Government enacted the Co-operative Societies Act, 1912 which had wider scope for other types of co-operative Societies Function. When, the co-operatives were brought under the list of provinces to enact their own Co-operative Act. Soon After independence many states brought their own co-operative laws. At the national level, a Multi state co-operative societies Act was enacted.

In the Post-Independence period, crores of rupees were spent on popularizing the co-operative movement and make it a successful venture. But the co-operative movement did not yield the expected results. The central planning commission realized that the efforts and the funds invested went in vain so the Ardhanarshwaran Committee was formed in 1987. The outcome of the report the co-operative movement has failed in the country because of the "high intervention of the Government in the affairs of the Co-operatives".

Realizing the need for growth the co-operative sector, that promotes the economic development of the people, requires, the voluntary participation of the members. The planning commission under the leadership of Sir Brahmprakash Choudhary constituted a committee to frame liberal co-operative law. The central Government circulated this model act to all states with an advice to incorporate the same. It ensures more power to the members, more member participation and less government intervention in the affairs of the co-operatives, freedom and removing restrictions. Freedom, self controls, self managed with no government interference in the day to day administration of the bank is the main theme.
